Johnston(2018) found that legends about martial arts figures are most often taught in various children's tales. In general, children's tales based on martial arts figures are skills of self-discovery and independence. By being able to portray figures of martial arts legends in children's tales, one will become accustomed and learn to incorporate the values of character development individually and more thoroughly. In addition, the ability to culturally transform needs to be taught in order to adapt to an individual's cultural behavior. Thus, the presence of prosocial characters in the stories of martial arts children is an integral part of the values of character development.

The 21st century learning paradigm is a learning paradigm that teaches work discipline and passion for consistent work. Tornberg, Wänström, Pozzoli and Hong(2019: 586) explains that 21st century learning, work ability, and skills are factors that enable you to work consistently and independently. In order to maintain these key factors, even when a person learns to develop his character, the quality and discipline of the person increase thereafter.

The development of the values of character development, even if the individual learns to develop a nationally insightful character. Hyatt (2017: 16) explain that various cycle analyzes are performed during the development of a material, which provides an opportunity to analyze self-withdrawal and skills.

In order to develop character values, activities and creative steps that provide an opportunity are analyzed, namely the development of students' creativity. For this reason, the values of personality development are necessary for the development of identity.

The development of human values is an integral part of the diversity of life system. Zăbavă(2020: 23) argue that the development of this system, and later of human principles, plays an important role in the development of the learning process and the strengthening of identity. To develop this, the development program is closely related to the design of information systems that provide opportunities for improvement

The development of character values is an integral part of the development of human values. Charm (2020: 274) argue that the ability to develop these values is closely related to the design of structures that provide data and facts about humanity. The development of character development values is closely related to personality development. To develop this, it is necessary to create character development values that provide an opportunity for transformation.

Creating values for education and development requires data and facts to build identity. Alexander (2019: 75) explained that self-transformation is an integral part of comprehensive and consistent development.

Teaching character development values, while being developed, is a measurable and structured value education program. For this reason, a system that is appropriate for character development is needed.

Creating measured and structured religious values. In order to develop human qualities, the development of these values is closely linked to the development of culture. Scheiner (220: 336) explains that this provides an opportunity to transform the values of character development and increase one's abilities. The development of character values is an integral part of humanity and independence.

Conclusion

The ability to be independent is an integral part of the ability to develop behavioral and cultural skills. In this case, the ability to cultivate character values and spiritual education is an integral part of cultural and character development values. To do this, we need the spiritual values we use to cultivate the values of character development. In shaping the values of character creation, the stories of children in the Chinese rhythm generation are an integral part of shaping the cultural background. To create this, an absolute study of the individual is necessary. To create values of character development that ensure cultural development that adapts to the evolution of global currents. For this reason, the development of these values must be optimally and carefully planned.
